

STEEL FIRMS MAKE THREAT TO CONGRESS

ARMOR PLATE MANUFACTURERS WILL RAISE PRICES IF GOV.
ERNMENT GOES INTO BUSINESS.

BLUFF FAILS TO WORK

Senate Committee Votes to Report
Favorably on Naval Preparedness
Bill Passed by House.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, Feb. 8.—Private armor plate manufacturers notified the senate naval committee today that they would raise the price of armor plate $200 a ton if congress decided to erect or purchase armor plate factories for the government. The committee nevertheless voted to recommend government plants.

Report Favorably on Bill.

After a brief consideration the committee ordered reported the bill authorizing expenditure of $500,000 to equip Mare Island navy yard, near San Francisco, for battleship construction, and $100,000 to enlarge facilities of Newport navy yard, and the bill to add 300 shipbuilding to the first class at Annapolis next July. These two bills passed the house yesterday.

Senator Penrose, republican, of Pennsylvania, notified the committee of the stand of the armor plate companies, those chiefly concerned being the Bethlehem and Midvale steel companies.

The committee voted, nevertheless, nine to three, to report favorably Senator Tillman's bill to authorize the secretary of the navy to provide either by erection or purchase of an armor plate factory or both, with capacity of not less than 20,000 tons of armor a year. The bill would appropriate $11,000,000. Senators Penrose, Lodge and Smith of Michigan, republicans, voted against reporting the bill.

Chairman Tillman and Senators Swanson, Bryan, Johnson, Maine, Child, Philbin and Pittman, democrats, and Camp and Foxworth, republicans, voted for it.

"Will Stop Robbers," Tillman.

"The threat of the armor barons to hold up the government will not affect congress," said Senator Tillman. "We are given to understand that the armor manufacturers would increase the price because government manufacture of armor plate would force them to go out of that business and they would then raise the price to the government to provide them with an amortization fund. But I guess we can find a way to stop the robbers. In time of trouble we could seize their plants and operate them by right of eminent domain."

LUSITANIA OUTLOOK IS CALLED HOPEFUL

President Considers Latest Proposals
From Germany as Almost, if Not Entirely, Acceptable.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, Feb. 8.—That the Lusitania case looks "very hopeful" was the statement made by a high administration official, following the conference between President Wilson and Secretary Lansing. It was indicated that the president considers Germany's latest offer as almost, if not entirely, acceptable.

Secretary Lansing went to the White House an hour before the cabinet meeting to discuss the Lusitania negotiations with President Wilson. Mr. Lansing said an announcement on Germany's latest proposals was probable today, and he could not say whether he would later confer with Count Von Bernstorff.

A high official close to the state department late today made an announcement that a settlement of the Lusitania affair was in sight within the next few days.

The United States has not added to its previous demands and neither has it decreased them. The trouble of the United States with Germany is decreasing. "You can draw your own conclusions," he said.

"The wording of the latest note from Berlin covers the purpose desired by the United States in regard to the demand of our government that the Lusitania be declared an illegal act."

"No further admission is desired by the administration from Berlin."

The secretary of state, who was seen later, said he would give no announcement of his conference with Count Von Bernstorff. He further added that it was possible that nothing would be known of the meeting for several days after today, when he was to see President Wilson, late this afternoon.

AWARD ALLOWED FOR AN UNUSUAL INJURY

Industrial Commission Fixes $3,670 as Compensation for Milwaukee Man
Stricken Down by Explosion.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Madison, Wis., Feb. 8.—One of the few cases of total permanent disability to come before the industrial commission for adjudication was the subject of an order by that body today. It awarded $3,670 to Anna Wohlge-muth, guardian for Eugene Wohlge-muth, who was injured March 17, 1915, while in the employ of A. J. Kaestner of Milwaukee.

The case has attracted considerable attention among medical men. Last March while in the employ of A. J. Kaestner, Wohlge-muth, as the result of a gasoline explosion, sustained burns on his left arm, side of his face and neck. He was taken to the hospital and four days later, while under a physician's treatment, he became unconscious and did not awaken for three days after today, when he found otherwise. He directed that the loss of power to speak and write and a paresis on the right side of his face. The function of the facial nerves was restored in about two months, but the loss of power to speak and write has persisted to the present time. The applicant has learned to say three or four words and to write to nine, leaving out three numbers.

Wohlge-muth is forty-six years of age and has been a carriage painter since fourteen years of age. Prior to the accident the applicant was in good health. The respondent contended it was due to cerebral hemorrhage, but was merely accidental and did not arise out of the accident. The commission awarded the sum of $3,670.21 he paid. The Illinois indemnity exchange is made a party to the action.

U. S.-NICARAGUA TREATY PROTEST BY SAN SALVADOR

Second Protest to State Department
Forthcoming Regarding Acquisition of Gulf Naval Station.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
San Salvador, Feb. 8.—The government of San Salvador today sent a dispatch to its minister at Washington requesting him to lodge a further protest with the department of state against the pending treaty between the United States and Nicaragua. The government makes clear its viewpoint that this treaty violates the neutrality of Honduras, which it points out the United States guaranteed through conventions with the central American states, and that a committee of the senate, previous to the conclusion of this treaty, approved the conclusion of pending negotiations and in spite of previous protests from Salvador.

The proposed treaty between the United States and Nicaragua would give the former the exclusive right to construct any Nicaraguan-Isthmian canal and a naval base in the Gulf of Fonseca.

Hodges of Kansas attacked today the "fake cancer cures," "quack doctors" and "snake oil" peddlers, fattening on the pain racked bodies of their stricken victims, in an address before the congress of medical education here today. He appeared as guest of the congress.

Mr. Hodges lauded the steps taken by county, state and national organizations to combat the "fake cancer cures," "quack doctors" and "snake oil" peddlers, fattening on the pain racked bodies of their stricken victims, in an address before the congress of medical education here today. He appeared as guest of the congress.

How Tennessee, formerly admitted to be one of the most backward states as regards medical legislation, had taken a long step toward correcting conditions there was detailed to the congress by Prof. I. R. Hudson, secretary of the Tennessee board of preliminary examination. One year ago, said Prof. Hudson, almost anyone could appear before the state board of examiners for medical education, regardless of previous education.

"At the instance of the Tennessee Medical society, the legislature last year provided for an examining board of epidemic medicine, body composed of instructors and business men, but no physician," said Prof. Hudson. "This board examines all applicants in relation to their education only, and if the applicant fails in this test he is barred from taking the medical examination."

Bandits Fire on Train.
New York, Feb. 8.—A party of four Americans who arrived here today from Vera Cruz on the steamer Esperanza, reported that the train on which they traveled from Mexico City to Vera Cruz, had been under attack from bandits throughout the entire journey.

The engineers said they left Mexico City two weeks ago and traveled in an armored car, carrying four machine guns. According to their story, the whole territory between the Mexican capital and the seacoast is invested with bandits.

Dr. John H. Davis, an American physician at Mexico City, was quoted as saying there were several thousand cases of typhus fever in the capital and that smallpox was raging at Tampico. The engineers asserted that Carranza's power was waning and that General Obregon was the man of the hour in Mexico City.

Complicity in cutting the lines of the Southern Pacific railway near El Paso in December in an attempt to hamper the movement of Carranza forces through Mexican territory to attack Villa forces in Mexico, is charged. SERBS' STATE ARCHIVES FOUND BY AUSTRIANS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Budapest, Feb. 8.—Notwithstanding the utmost efforts of the Serbians to rescue all their archives, those belonging to the ministry of state have been captured by the Austrians and taken to Vienna. The discovery of the important documents is due to an Austrian Red Cross nurse.

During the Austrian crossing of the Save river, the general staff of one division crossed itself in a room of the hotel. The nurse who had been captured by the Serbians and forced by them to take the documents had been there two months, she told the Austrians. Just after her arrival, she said, a huge motor truck rolled up one night. It was manned by fleeing Serbians who forced those in the house into a room and locked them in for six hours. When they were released the motor truck and the huge cases it had contained had disappeared. The nurse was sure the truck had been unloaded at the cloister.

The general staff immediately began an investigation of the premises. In the wine cellar they finally came on traces of newly turned earth. When they excavated at this point they found 64 cases containing all the state archives.

They see so much suffering that their own pains become insignificant.

AUSTRALIA IS WILLING TO SPEND MILLIONS IN SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Melbourne, Australia, Feb. 8.—Prime Minister Hughes announced at a luncheon here today that the Australian government was prepared to spend up to $2,500,000 if necessary on the establishment of an institution for research in science.

Mr. Hughes said that it had been shown what potential wealth there was in Australia, but the Australian people were practically in their swaddling clothes in the matter of scientific research. He thought with national laboratory Australians could utilize science in opening up new avenues of industrial effort. They could increase the productivity of the country from 15 to 20 per cent.

"The Commonwealth government," he went on, "will endeavor to co-ordinate the research in the various states in this direction. We are committed to details. As far as possible we will avail ourselves of the ablest and services of the scientific men in our own universities, but if necessary to strengthen the staff it can be reinforced from outside. I will make inquiries during my visit abroad, but in the meantime the government without delay will take the necessary steps to give the institution a start."

Mr. Hughes suggested that the Melbourne professors invite representatives of the various universities in the other states to meet them in Melbourne on an early date to consider the whole question.

URGENT EARLY ADJUSTING OF BLOCKADE

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN SUG-GESTS BRYCE OR BALFOUR
BE SENT TO ADJUST
CONTROVERSY.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, Feb. 8.—The Manchester Guardian in an editorial suggests that Viscount Bryce, formerly British ambassador to the United States, or Arthur G. Balfour, first lord of admiralty, will be sent to the United States with full powers to adjust the blockade controversy with the government in Washington. It publishes a statement from its London correspondent to the effect that people close to the Anglo-American affairs express the opinion that such steps should be taken.

GRAVE VIEW IS TAKEN

Situation May Lead Into Serious Difficulties Says Manchester Guardian in a Lengthy Discussion of Case.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
The Guardian says the blockade question is being pressed throughout the United States not less persistently than in the Lusitania question, and with the dispute regarding the phraseology to be employed with Germany once settled, excessive attention will be given to the blockade matter. The Guardian dwells upon the fact that the British people are puzzled that purely technical matters should create as much excitement as the question of human life, and says:

"British opinion has persistently overlooked the fact that German diplomacy possessed two great advantages over ours. The first was that the critical and even hostile attitude of the American navy towards British sea power as well as the theory on which it is based is almost as old as the American nation itself. The second was that the United States arose out of what was regarded by America as an abuse of our power at sea. We have never been able to detail the United States has not only lost the war and now the United States government regards itself as the natural champion of neutral rights. It is impossible to exaggerate the influence of these historic facts on American policy."

Recalls Paris Conference.
"Secondly, it will be remembered that at the conference of Paris, fifty years ago, which abolished privateering, the United States refused to agree on the ground that although the abolition might aid the cause of humanity and war, it favors the great naval powers of the world at the expense of the powers with a large mercantile marine but a small navy. Something of this principle influences America's attitude towards Germany's use of the submarine as an instrument of war."

The Guardian declares the controversy touches one of the strongest currents of American history, with which Great Britain must deal and while there is little sympathy among the American people, in any other country in the world is the force of tradition in conduct of foreign relations so strong.

Demands Immediate Attention.
"We take a very grave view of the difficulties into which the whole of this controversy may lead us," says the Guardian. "There is great work to be done and it is work that cannot be done too soon."

The Guardian says in conclusion: "This is not merely a problem of war, it may effect the whole future of English speaking people."

Churches of today are more awake to the problems confronting them than they were fifty years ago, declared Dr. Robert Zaring of Chicago, editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate, in his address last evening before the Methodist Brotherhood. The day of denominational prejudices is past, he declared, and the day has come for united action.

People look upon Sunday meetings differently than they did fifty years ago, Dr. Zaring said. Then they said they had been to church service, meaning thereby they had fulfilled their Christian obligations. Today people attend church or divine worship, which is only a part of their Christian activity. He compared church attendance with an automobile which is taken to the garage for a supply of gasoline; while the tank is being filled the machine is giving no service. While the individual is at church he is only securing fuel with which to make his Christianity effective in every day life.

Denominations are working together for the general benefit of the entire church membership and the community in general, Dr. Zaring maintained. Union meetings are the regular things nowadays while a half century ago the church was a collection of separate denominations. The broader view has resulted in a wider effectiveness for all denominations which are working together for the general uplift of humanity.

Dr. Zaring said the church was one, if not the most practical institution in existence. It is continually spreading out and today it can be found in practically every part of the world. In direct way the church leads in the organization of hospitals, which is a very practical service to the public.

Many other institutions, such as the Young Men's Christian Associations, colleges and schools all receive their inspiration and help from the church organization. Without the church life in these institutions they could not continue.

The Methodist Brotherhood enjoyed their monthly banquet, which was served by the ladies of the church in the dining room previous to Dr. Zaring's address. After the dinner the meeting was adjourned to the Sunday school rooms, where the program was given.

SMALL DROP SEEN IN RIVER WATERS

Government Water Gauge Registered Fraction of Foot Lower Height at Upper Plant Today.

A slight drop today was registered by the water gauge at the upper power house. During the morning a rise of one-fourth of an inch was found, but this was thought to be due to a brisk south wind. The tailwaters, those below the dam, also rose, more so in fact, than the water above the dam. Reports from up and down the river are "Flood dangers for present, postponed—but not in any sense diverted."

Considerable shell ice is forming in the river, but it continues to move rapidly. Piers and docks along the banks here are weighted down with tons of ice collected during the past week.

Today's weather report predicted snow, which fell during the morning. Snow is also prophesied for Wednesday. Tonight the weather man predicts, will be warmer.

WHITEWATER NORMAL PLAYS MILWAUKEE ON WEDNESDAY

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Milwaukee, Feb. 8.—The Milwaukee Normal school will tackle the White-water live at Milwaukee on Wednesday for the second time. The Angelites won the first time, 17 to 13.

The Normalites have a clear record so far, having won two games, lost none. The teachers defeated the Oshkosh and Whitewater teams, while the White-water Normal ranks last, having lost all games so far.

The various teams in the Jungle League are doing fine work. Star teams once a week every other team, outdoor baseball is being played for the present, and it is expected that in the near future, when the weather will permit, outdoor baseball and track will be taken up.

Freddie Welsh's manager, Harry Pollok, announces that he has arranged a featherweight battle to his credit. He is now in a campaign to win the Johnny Kilbane's crown. Leo Vincent is the lad's name, and he is from Philadelphia, where, Pollok writes, Leo has made a whirlwind cleanup every body's own weight. Now he's gone to New York in search of victims.

ALUMNI IN GAME WITH HIGH FIVE

Old Students Trim School Players 24 to 14 in Practice Game at the High School.

The alumni five showed the high school basketball squad some good points in the art of handling the ball last night in a short practice game. Although the school players secured seven baskets to twelve for the alumni, Edler, the star Cardinal player, was out in a suit and many times would dribble down the floor through the high men. Douglas, one of the men on the graduates' team, showed up strong on basket shooting and he found the rim five times.

Richards and Kober got into the teamwork of times and the former scored five baskets and Kober got two. Coach Keck kept the men at work up until the close of the game and in the last few minutes the high school scored two baskets. During the last few minutes of all games the high have been weak. If they can keep the game moving until the whistle blows for time their chances for winning a game would be much greater.

The game Friday will be the biggest of the season. Beloit is expected to come up here with about one hundred and fifty rooters. A mass meeting will be held at the local high school Friday night, after school to learn new plays and songs. Spirit will not be lacking, and the H. S. squad will know that the members of the school are behind them, making a victory possible. The two second teams from the schools will play a preliminary game before the big contest. A record crowd will be on hand.

FEDERAL LEAGUE SUIT IS DISMISSED FROM THE COURT

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Chicago, Ill., Feb. 8.—Federal Judge Landis dismissed the Federal league suit against organized baseball on Monday, thus legally ending the baseball war. The suit, directed against the national commission, its "component parts" charged that organized baseball violated the Sherman law.

The dismissal was on motion of the erstwhile federal league.

Stewart S. Janney, attorney representing the Baltimore Federal league club, declared his clients had no objections to dismissal of the suit providing it could be dismissed without prejudice to the rights of any individual intervenor.

Landis assured Janney on this point and the Baltimore lawyer declared that unless adjusted to the difficulty of the national commission in New York next week, legal steps will be taken.

Janney declared he has been virtually assured by Garry Hermann that these difficulties will be smoothed over. If not, he intimated, a civil suit for damages or a new proceeding under the anti-trust law would be instituted.

In dismissing the suit Judge Landis, himself an ardent fan, declared he had long postponed a decision because he felt a ruling would be prejudicial to the best interests of baseball.

BADGERS TO START WORK FOR THE ILLINOIS GAME

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Madison, Wis., Feb. 8.—With but two more days of examinations the University of Wisconsin basketball team is still in tact, and Coach Meanwell has already started work for the Illinois game, which will be played on Feb. 19.

So far none of Meanwell's stars have been felled, and unless something unfortunate happens before Thursday, the varsity five will have its full strength to meet the Illinois in the battle that will decide whether or not the Badgers have a chance of tying the Buckers for championship honors. The great problem that is confronting Dr. Meanwell is how to take care of Ralph Woods, the miniature Illinois whirling dervish who scored nine baskets against the varsity in the last game between the two schools at Urbana a few weeks ago.

BICYCLE RIDERS IN FINAL SPRINT TODAY

International Six Day Contest Will Be Decided Tonight With a "Berlin Finish."

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Chicago, Feb. 8.—With more than 1,300 miles to their credit, contestants in the international six day bicycle race at the coliseum here today started the final sprint of the race. It closes at eleven o'clock tonight. Beginning at 1 a. m. the nine contestants who are bunched in four laps of one another, will ride a short relief for eleven hours in a battle for first place. At 10 p. m. the race will be stopped and the issue decided by what is known as the "Berlin finish," based on the position of the teams at the end of the eleventh hour. Following is the standing:

First: Magin-Lawrence; Second: McNamara-Spears; Third: Ryan-Thomas; Fourth: Madden-Hanley; distance, 1,302 miles, seven laps. Second: Wohlhab-Kopsky; distance, 1,302 miles, six laps. Third: Grimm-Rudd-Russ; distance, 1,302 miles, four laps. The Corry-Obert teams at the beginning of racing today were four laps behind the leaders.

Last night's riding failed to change the position of the leaders. Magin, who was paired with Obert, was unable to continue the grind on account of injuries received when he fell, and Obert paired with Corry when Lawson, Corry's partner, quite with a sprained knee.

MORRIS MILLER

What does the Cincinnati club want with Bill Louden, former member of the Detroit team, who jumped the Providence team for the Feds, and failed to make good? Reporters are to the effect that Louden has been signed by the Cincinnati club and that he is figured on as being one of the team's regular infielders. Louden is not of major league caliber and never has been, and just who tipped off Manager Herzog that he had a chance to make good with his team is not known, but whoever it was must have been kidding the Hermann team leader.

Great ball players do not make great managers—not always. Occasionally a star of the volunteer ranks becomes a successful leader. McGraw, Jennings, and Fielder Jones were wonderful ball players, and as managers they have won pennants.

But then again, have Napoleon Lajoie, Bob Wallace, Johnny Evers, Charley Nichols, Johnny Kling, Billy Dahlen, Fred Tenny, and others who failed to shine as major league managers.

WEATHER FORECAST.

Probably snow tonight and Wednesday; warmer tonight.

SCHOOL NEWS.
A recent number of the Journal of Education contains an article by a school superintendent, telling about the use he has made of newspaper publicity in his field. He furnishes news items regularly, reporting original work or any specially good results, also calling attention to defects in buildings and equipment. He believes that this policy has increased school attendance and created public sentiment favorable to liberal appropriations.

The schools are a great center of news events. In them nearly a fourth of the population is digging for an education. Local history is being made there. Yet little of what happens gets into the newspapers. Some people may say that school work is routine, not news, the same thing week after week. Yet school people are constantly trying out new ideas. It would probably be the general consensus of newspaper people that when school authorities are asked if there is any news, they are apt not to be able to think of any.

A school superintendent was some years ago asked for an interview on some original methods he was trying out. He courteously asked to be excused. He felt that school work should be kept out of sight, that if the public were told too much, they would criticize. This official some time later lost his position. He had done nothing to build up public sentiment, and the politicians had him at their mercy.

The contrast between these points of view is worth the study of educators. The schools need an active and interested public sentiment. The more the people know of what is being done, the more sympathetic will be the popular attitude, and the easier school taxes will be raised.

WILSON'S BLUNDER.
That Woodrow Wilson is a tyro and a bungler when he attempts to essay the role of apostle of preparedness is demonstrated, it is contended by the character of the speeches he has been making. In New York, Pittsburgh and Cleveland he urged preparedness with amazing recklessness, declaring that the United States must be ready for preparedness "not next week or next year, but tomorrow" and clearly intimating that a grave international crisis was at hand. These words from the chief executive, construed in Berlin as a plain prediction of war with Germany, immediately warning was flashed by wireless from Colonel House, Mr. Wilson's personal representative, and at Milwaukee, President Wilson undertook to back-track, and so modified his words as practically to take back most of what he had said before. Mr. Wilson has, through his adroit secretary, prematurely boasted of a diplomatic triumph over Germany which he never gained. Germany has been sorely perplexed by the misrepresentation, and now considers that he purposes to gain his end by force of arms, having failed to do so by diplomacy.

THE ARMY OF BICYCLE RIDERS.
The bicycle does not figure much in the newspapers, but it is still a very active feature of daily life. Over 400,000 of them were sold last year, including many motorcycles. Bicycling will probably never again be a fashionable sport. But it is an enormous convenience, and permits many a workman to live in a comfortable quarter of the city, within his means, and wheel in to his work.
The prominence of the bicycle in sporting life twenty years ago seems almost unbelievable now. Men of a type that now would be too lazy to walk a mile to their business, used to make their century runs on their wheels and boast of the ease of the exertion. The society girls found the exercise rather strenuous, but they would never admit it.
In moderation it was a very healthful sport, and it seems too bad that the wheel of today is merely a working tool. The young fry still find pleasure in it though, and the school yard frequently looks like a bicycle club rendezvous of twenty-five years ago.

TOO MANY KNOCKERS.
There are always persons who are ready to complain and knock the efforts of men and women who are looking to the uplift of any community. They apparently take great personal pleasure in voicing their own individual opinions in public places much to the detriment of the community as a whole. This has been too true in the case of Janesville. There have been too many cross interests at work for a perfectly harmonious advancement. However the city is advancing despite these complaining citizens and will continue to advance until it takes its place in the fore front of the smaller Wisconsin cities. If half the energy used by the disgruntled class of citizens was devoted to boosting home industries and endorsing the labors of the men and women seeking to do the greatest good within their power, it would be much easier to progress.

THE RIVER.
Rock river merely comes to its own on special occasions. Time was when it was quite an important stream, but the cutting down of the timber watershed had its effect and from a mighty stream it dwindles down to the average part of the year into a nice, respectable sort of a country stream. Just now it is showing some of its old-time energy and it means to be recognized. The rapid rise of the water, the ice jams and the other conditions make some fearful of what may happen, but at any rate the old stream is having a good time again.

RAUS MIT EM.
Some day there is going to be a... spring freshet down the hills of the city just as in past years when the snow melts and the spring rains arrive. While the telephone companies have made great strides in taking down the majority of their unsightly poles in the downtown business district still many remain that are going to work the same havoc when the usual freshet time comes as in the past. Out with them before they are a menace once more.

If that court martial called to try two United States officers who crossed the Mexican border to rescue American soldiers captured by the Mexican irregulars did not acquit the officers they will be bereft of their right senses. If Uncle Sam will not protect his boys in blue and some individual is brave enough to do so, there should be promotion, not court martial, in store for him.

It would appear as though Postmaster General Burleson had sort of overstepped his authority in a few postoffice appointments, especially in the Dakotas. There is somewhat of a discontented view on many of the Wisconsin appointments as well that might be looked into.

The Janesville Park association plans for a home coming during the week of the Janesville fair. It is a fine idea and one that should be encouraged. It would see Janesville at its best and give the returned visitors a fine opportunity of meeting lots of old friends.

That state convention to endorse a candidate for the United States senatorship is progressing apace. Already five out of the eleven congressional districts have named their delegates to make the endorsement.

It would appear that even though the Lusitania was sunk months ago there is still some question as to Germany's liability, according to dollar and cents value on American lives lost.

Some of those people who are so suspicious of the genuineness of bargain sales might still be willing to patronize them if the merchants would extend them further credit.

People ought to realize the necessity of preparedness, when they reflect how the Germans might come over and bombard the bath houses of Atlantic City and Coney Island.

The minstrel shows again demonstrate how fine an ancient joke sounds, when it is pronounced by a man biased with burnt cork and plenty of rouge on his lips.

There were not many cases where Robert Burns' birthday was celebrated by reading his poems, but a large number of people called for his favorite liquid refreshment.

The newspaper space with illustrations formerly given to silver wedding anniversaries now seems to go to the remembrance of divorced persons.

It must give the weather bureau a feeling of solid confidence to know that if all signs fail, they can still fall back on some old almanac.

The newspapers can't be expected to keep their best reporters covering congress after the baseball training camps get started.

This zero weather makes one wonder if the ice man and the coal man are not in cahoots with the ground hog after all.

The Searcher.
A woman's laugh, however gay,
Or simpering, or simple;
It often merely a display
Of dentistry or duple.

Though Christmas was now long past, Myrtle Swags will never tire of absently examining her beetle fur ear muffs.
As our story opens, she is bending over them rapidly, an intense expression on her charming reticulated face, oblivious to all else.

The room, excepting for the sounds made by the red and green wall paper, was in silence.

Her neglected breakfast by her side, Myrtle sat up in bed, lost to everything save the beetle fur ear muffs.

Suddenly, tears filled her eyes and nose, and she wept, some of the drops falling on the ear muffs, which luckily were washable.

Can it be that Myrtle is mourning the loss of a dear one who nevertheless was considerate enough not to die until after Christmas?

No, bodesome reader.
The ear muffs were the only gift whose price tag Myrtle was unable to decipher, though she had tried every day since Christmas.

COST FOR PRINTERS SUPPLIES GOING UP

Marked Advances Shown Since Start of European War.—Colored Paper and Inks at Premium.

Although there have been marked increases during the last year in the materials used by printers, more increases are expected in the next few months. No one will venture to say what the situation will be if the war continues another year.

Paper, inks, type, printers' rollers, machinery and metals of various kinds have all advanced. Paper, in various grades, has gone up from 5 to 20 per cent. Printers have to pay for ink from 15 to 150 per cent more than a year ago. Only slight increases have been made in the cost of type to us.

Colored Paper is Scarce. Colored paper is becoming scarce. So far it has been possible to get it because large stocks on hand when the war broke out and the manufacturers have been able to get coloring matter. But now the stocks are low and the supply of coloring matter is nearly gone. It is impossible to say what the increase is on these papers for the prices are constantly going up.

Up to the present time, the increase runs from 25 to 50 per cent. Printers cannot make prices on big jobs until they have verified each quotation from the jobbers.

In fact, the prices of paper are being changed almost every twenty-four hours by the manufacturers. It is declared that no price is allowed to stand for long, that some kinds have gone up only 5 per cent but most grades about 10 per cent, while a few have increased 15 to 20 per cent. Chemicals cost 500 per cent.

There has been an increase of about 15 per cent in zinc etchings and half tones. Electrotype have gone up 10 to 15 per cent. Further big increases are to be expected in a month or six weeks. Chicago prices have been above those of elsewhere for about three months. Prices of all chemicals are constantly mounting, some having increased 500 per cent.

REMARKABLE IMPROVEMENTS IN TREATING THE WOUNDED MEN IN THE GERMAN ARMY

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Berlin, Feb. 8.—According to figures just published by the German Medical Weekly (Deutsche Medizinische Wochenschrift) the medical corps of the German army has established better and better results almost every month in the treatment of the wounded. The record at the start was, in the very high one, 84.8 per cent of the wounded being so completely healed that they could return to the ranks, 3 per cent dying and the remaining 12.2 per cent being discharged as unfit for further service or sent away on furlough for later examination. The figures improved from then on till the number of men returning to duty in May, June and July reached above 91 per cent. The most striking improvement was the reduction in the ratio of deaths, these amounted in June and July to only 1.2 per cent of the wounded, as compared with 12 per cent for August, 1914. Similarly, the ratio of wounded men sent home unfit for duty or furloughed for further examination was reduced from 12.2 to 7. For the first year of the war the total record was as follows: 89.5 healed and returned to the ranks, 8.8 discharged as unfit for duty or for further examination, only only 1.7 per cent died.

CALL ON LABORERS IN GERMANY IS LESS THAN FIRST BELIEVED

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Berlin, Feb. 8.—According to the records of the sick insurance office of Berlin it appears that the withdrawals of workmen from employment in shops and factories for war duty last year were far less numerous than had been generally believed. Especially was the reduction slight in the youngest and oldest classes of men subject to military duty. Thus workmen between 17 and 20 years old represented on January 1, 1915, 15.2 per cent of all the names on the lists, but by October 1 they had been reduced only to 14 per cent. The reduction for the class between 41 and 45 years was from 8.3 to 7.5 per cent. Even for all the classes subject to military duty the average reduction for the nine months was only about 3 per cent. It is a remarkable fact that even now the class of young men between 21 and 25 is larger than any other one in the shops and factories of Berlin, constituting 16.5 per cent of all the names listed.

PLENTY OF CEREALS FOR CENTRAL POWERS

Fifty Thousand Carloads Purchased from Rumania by Central Powers.—Negotiations Closed.

Bucharest, Rumania, Feb. 8.—Fifty thousand carloads of cereals, or about 10,000,000 bushels, have been purchased by the Central Powers from Rumania as the result of negotiations which have just been terminated. An option for another 50,000 carloads has also been secured by the agents of the Central Powers. The Rumanian government has sanctioned the transaction and export begins immediately. A great volume of grain bought by the Central Powers months ago, but so far unexported for various reasons, will also be moved now. Shipment will be made over every available railroad and on the Danube.

Negotiations were conducted by the Rumanian Grain Sales Commission and the Cereal Center of the German, Austrian and Hungarian governments. The grain consists principally of Indian corn, wheat, barley, beans and lentils. It will be paid for partly in gold, but the greater share of the purchase price will be in German currency. The transaction is remarkable for the fact that for the cost of the cereals the Rumanian government will get a credit on the Deutsche Reichsbank in Berlin, for which the Rumanian National bank will then issue notes. These notes reaching the sellers of the grain to the foodstuffs so procured will be divided among Germany and Austria-Hungary as follows: Six cars of each shipment to Germany and five to Austria and Hungary. Cars and means of transportation will be provided by the Central Powers.

With another 50,000 cars held on option by the Central Powers, and with Turkey and Bulgaria also in the market, Rumania disposes of her entire 1915 crop, of which but little has been moved. Available also is still a great stock of the 1914 crop, which Rumania was not disposed to sell to the Central Powers last spring and summer, owing to the belief that the Dardanelles would be forced by the Allies. Some of the cereals sold to the Allies were to Germany and five to Austria and Hungary. The conquest of Serbia closed this route.

With no prospect that the 1915 crop could be sold to neutrals or the Entente group, Rumania was obliged to sell to the Central Powers group, at a price which is said to be very advantageous to the latter. Figures are not available, however. But that the Central Powers drove a hard bargain is said here to be indicated by the fact that very little gold changes hands. This is true in the case of purchases in Rumania by the Central Powers were made with gold as the only acceptable equivalent.

The transaction was discussed in the last issue of the Entente group, and was stoutly opposed by the friends of the Entente, among them notably Jake Jonsescu, Toma Jonsescu, Filipescu and Milea. Government members and the grain and landed class interests took the position that Rumania stood in sore need of the revenues to be derived from the sale, these being the only income Rumania has with which to cover imports. Very stormy scenes ensued, but the opposition to Rumania's position is due to her complete isolation from the world's consumers. The closing of the Dardanelles left Rumania no other route than that through Serbia, which is now closed also. To the Central Powers Rumania would not sell, and what little was bought had to be taken at prohibitive prices to which vast sums in the form of extortion of one sort or another had to be added.

SMITH DRUG CO. THE REXALL STORE

It is believed that the present transaction clears the slate. Agents of the Entente governments were active to prevent the sale, but were defeated by the fact that Rumania now has physical contact and communication, does not have to buy grain in foreign markets. The possibility of moving the grain over the Russian railroads and through a Russian port into England and France was then held up by the Entente agents. But Rumanian grain producers could not share this view, nor were they able to see their interests cared for by storing all the grain on options. They were willing to sell their products and store them on a cash-in-hand basis. Many of them had lost considerable sums by storing their grain in 1914 under an arrangement with Entente agents, who later refused to take up their options and promises on the plea that faulty storage had spoiled the grain.

Negotiations will soon be undertaken for the sale to the Central Powers of about 250,000 tons of benzine and gasoline now held in storage, and the monthly output of 25,000 tons of the same fuels. Rumania's position is such at present that, as opposition members in the Rumanian parliament have pointed out, she has become the ally of the Central Powers economically if the military situation does not change in favor of the Allies.

This is true also in respect to Rumanian imports which at present come from Germany and Austria-Hungary, and which, with most stores

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE) Madison, Feb. 8.—Wisconsin farmers are instructed in various ways of constructing a water system on their place in a bulletin issued today by the Wisconsin Bankers' association agricultural committee. The bulletin states that a farmer should figure that it will take twenty-five gallons of water a day for each person; ten for each horse and cow; and two for hogs and sheep. The three systems described in the bulletin are the elevated tank, air and water pressure, and fresh water direct from the well. The latter is the most development in water supply systems and costs about $300 to install.

The concern has been in active business for the past year or two and requires additional funds to work to advantage. SMOKE DOES DAMAGE IN RESIDENCE FIRE Blaze Starting in Cellar in Stephenson Home on North Washington Street Does Over $200 Damage.

Fire and smoke damage amounted to over two hundred dollars the residence occupied by Henry Stephenson, 223 North Washington street, when flames started burning in the cellar between one and two o'clock this afternoon. The fire either started from clothes being hung too near the furnace pipe, or from a defect in the pipes.

Mrs. Stephenson received first warning of the fire when she saw smoke pouring out from the cellarway. She phoned to the department and then left the house with her small child as they were endangered because of the excessive amount of smoke on the arrival of the firemen, the chemicals were used to extinguish the fire in the cellar and the firemen opened all possible exits to clear the smoke out of the house. The fire had not yet started up the walls or considerable damage would have been caused. The residence is owned by A. Alread, Terrace street.

"GINGLES JINGLES"

THE PIKER.

The paths of ease are only myths and it was ever thus. Don't think that you can ride to fame upon a jenny bus. The other fellow's job looks soft and just the kind you'd like, but try it out and you will find that you must hit the pike. And if you're not there with the push and energy galore, you're nothing but a piker, piking for the other shore. The world has use for men who work and needs them every one, but nature prods the bubble and puts pikers on the run. The elevator going down is loaded with the guys who whittle dry goods boxes and build castles in the skies. Some men will sit as though spiked down and spin their tales of woe. While others with the wanderlust are always on the go. Thus discontent takes different forms, but brings the same result. It heads you for Hotel de Gink to join the Hobo out. Then let us all turn on the light and watch ourselves go by, and get a line on what we are and know the reason why. It matters not what stage we've reached, there's always room to grow. So do not be a piker, just be careful what you sow.

MERCHANDISE FAMINE DUE TO HIGH COSTS

Rising Prices Bound to Effect American Commerce Says Speaker at Association Convention.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.) Cincinnati, Feb. 8.—Possibilities of a merchandise famine consequent upon the soaring costs of raw materials affected by war conditions are to be considered at the seventh annual exposition of the Manufacturers association of America which opened here Monday. The point was emphasized in opening speeches by J. Lewis Coath and William Bromberg, both of Chicago, and President and Secretary respectively of the association.

The price tendency is decidedly upward and will be for some time, to come," said Mr. Bromberg in discussing the objects of the exposition. "But it is not so much a question of prices as of getting goods to stock retailers' shelves. The factories are flooded with orders but the prices of material are hitting the sky. This fact and other conditions arising from the gigantic upheaval in the raw materials of some wise buyers to consider the possibility of facing a merchandise famine."

The prime object of this association is to meet changing conditions by the direct sale of merchandise from the manufacturers and importer to the retailer.

The exposition will last a week and during the time more than 200 lines of merchandise from growers and manufacturers will be displayed at Central Music hall. The arrangement of the building for the exposition provides for 400 square feet of exhibition space, divided into more than 300 booths. Admission to the building and to the lectures on merchandise and their trade methods will be limited to merchants and their buyers.

Officers of the association predicted that several thousand tradesmen would be attracted to the exposition, pointing out that it would take nearly four months to visit the establishments of the firms and corporations represented and asserting that in addition the system of direct buying would allow savings of from ten to forty per cent in stock costs.

A series of entertainments had been announced for the visitors and the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce will be the host of the convention.

CHICAGO IS THE MARKET FOR HORSES FOR EUROPE

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Chicago, Feb. 8.—The most tranquil war order market is located here. It is the horse ring at the Union stock yards. There is practically no competition. German agents have given up attempts to boost the prices of horses because of the British blockade.

At present France and Italy are the only ones doing any buying. French agents are active in the market of about 400 horses a day. It is estimated that more than 2,000 horses are purchased daily throughout the country by agents of the allies.

Horses brought here are shipped to Crestline, Ill., 25 miles from here, where they are quartered until there are enough to make a trainload. Then they are shipped to Portland, Me., or Jersey City, N. J., from whence they are shipped abroad.

According to dealers there are enough horses in the United States to supply the warring nations for the next five years without any serious scarcity. They say there are 7,000,000 horses in this country.

The standard price for cavalry horses is $35 and for heavy artillery horses, $180. Every horse sold out of the horse ring is branded with a serial mark as a means of identification.

THE GIRL AND THE GAME...

Copyright 1915 by Frank H. Spearman.

"He patted her hand, rose and left her. Seagrue at a distance studied the outline of the slender figure and the striking silhouette of Helen's head and neck as she stood looking out on the rain-beaten landscape. He walked over to where she remained oblivious to his presence and ventured a few carefully chosen words of sympathy. Nothing so despicable, so pusillanimous as this had ever marked his career, but he had groomed himself for anything.

"I am in a position, Helen," he went on, "perhaps a better position than any among your father's friends, to take up his work where he left it off. His murderers are in jail—I will undertake to see to their punishment. His new line can be made a valuable property. I am willing and able to provide the means to put it through. But I am alone, as you know. I care for no one other than you—I've told you that. Let me take your troubles. Be my wife."

"I have told you," she said, looking down but speaking quick and firmly, "that I can't listen to you on that subject. Could you possibly expect me to do so at a moment like this—my father—his voice faltered—"scarcely buried!"

She put her handkerchief to her face and walked away. Swallowing his humiliation with a resolve to conquer her obstinacy yet, he followed her with his gaze up the stairs. Then he sauntered over to the table at which she had been conferring with his uncle. There lay the bundle of stock certificates. He felt so completely master of the situation that he involuntarily made a gesture as if to tear the batch in two.

Rhineclander, coming into the library at that moment from his room, saw the movement. He took the securities impatiently from Seagrue's hand. "You treat these as if they were waste paper. They are not. On the contrary, if I have my way that out-of-it is going to be built," he declared emphatically.

Leaving him, Rhineclander went upstairs to find Helen. "Put these certificates away, my dear," he said with seriousness. "Although they don't stand for much now—" he paused—"some day I may call on you for them."

Seagrue, laughing a little to himself had turned, when his uncle walked away, to light a cigarette. As he did this a servant approached him bearing a shabby-looking, finger-marked note. It bore no address.

Seagrue opened the envelope and read:

"Somebody will have to help me out of here or I'll squeal. No more at present from SPIKE."

It was a blunt shock. But Seagrue knew from what Capelle, his lawyer, had told him, that this man meant always what he said. He pondered his dilemma for a time, decided what must be done, asked a servant for his hat and coat and hastening out headed his car for Cedar Grove, where Spike and Hyde lay incarcerated. Arranging by telephone as soon as he reached the little town for a meeting with Capelle, Seagrue inquired his way to the prison.

The jailer had brought Spike his noonday meal—a dish of stew, a loaf of soggy bread and a tin of coffee—and Spike was settling himself on his iron cot when Seagrue, with the jailer, entered his cell.

Greetings passed between Seagrue and Spike as they met and the two exchanged a few blurring remarks, calculated to mislead the listening official. But Spike's roving eyes riveted themselves gradually on the bunch of jangling keys carried by the jailer in his hand. When the jailer looked his way, the bullet head of Spike was down and his eyes were fixed on the loaf of heavy bread from which he was tearing great chunks to eat. A thought had come into his head and if it could be successfully acted on, it offered a faint hope of escape. Watching his opportunity, he managed after some effort to make Seagrue understand what he wanted, i. e., that he should occupy for a while the jailer's attention.

In the meantime, while Spike's iron jaw was grinding at a chunk of the crust, he was tearing out the center of the loaf of bread with his hand and kneading the dough thus fished within his palm. Seagrue made a good confederate, and without much trouble engaged the jailer's interest. It was then that Spike, leaning back, managed, undetected, to pass the dough around the key that opened the lock of his own cell; in an instant he had the coveted impression.

A bell warned the jailer that the visitor's time was up. In parting, the confederates shook hands. As they did so, Spike slipped the dough, unserved, into Seagrue's palm and succeeded in conveying to him by signs an intimation of what he had given him.

Capelle, who had arrived on Seagrue's prearranged summons, at the appointed place, some distance from the jail, awaited Seagrue there with a grin: "Some expedition you've embarked on!"

NEWS NOTES from MOVIELAND

PAULINE FREDERICK'S INTERESTING PROBLEM

If a mother has deserted her baby daughter and husband to share the fortunes of a profligate court does she make atonement for her deed by paying the death penalty for a crime committed by that daughter?

"This is the problem set forth in 'The Spider,' a recent picture in which beautiful Pauline Frederick appears. Beside its tense dramatic situations, the play has the additional interest of presenting Miss Frederick in two absolutely different roles, the one a notorious Parisian beauty, and the other her charming and ingenious daughter whom the woman deserted when she was a little baby.

HOUDINI ADMITS THAT HE'S OUTDONE

Harry Houdini, "the master of escape," does some thrilling stunts himself, but on a recent visit to Louisville he saw some dare devil riders displaying their prowess in a war scene under the direction of Scott Sidney.

Houdini declared that he never dreamed that such perils were hazarded by motion picture performers and said that he was well satisfied to stick to his occupation of untying himself and escaping from securely nailed boxes.

Claire Whitney and William E. Shay have just completed their work on "The Bird." It is a picture of oriental mystery and mysticism in which hypnotism plays an important part.

Robert Edeson, who stars in Kipling's "Light That Failed," which is being produced, says the title is a good one for the company was held up recently for three days owing to poor light when they were doing exteriors.

MAJESTIC PICTURE COLORED PRETTILY

"The Beloved Vagabond" Shown in Full Patche Glory With Splendid Cast.

You may call the photography of many pictures beautiful, but if you witness the picture of "The Beloved Vagabond," at the Majestic last night, pictured out in hand-colors, your idea of beauty might take a slight rise. The setting of the picture was based in England and France and the photography of the same was indeed wonderful. The theme of the story is a charmingly around the tale of one Parson, deprived in his youth of his faith in man; for his search for it throughout the land; of his sad return and of something he found in a cottage. Edwin Arden took the principal role in a story which does not stand for much now—"he paused—"some day I may call on you for them."

Seagrue, laughing a little to himself had turned, when his uncle walked away, to light a cigarette. As he did this a servant approached him bearing a shabby-looking, finger-marked note. It bore no address.

Seagrue opened the envelope and read:

"Somebody will have to help me out of here or I'll squeal. No more at present from SPIKE."

It was a blunt shock. But Seagrue knew from what Capelle, his lawyer, had told him, that this man meant always what he said. He pondered his dilemma for a time, decided what must be done, asked a servant for his hat and coat and hastening out headed his car for Cedar Grove, where Spike and Hyde lay incarcerated. Arranging by telephone as soon as he reached the little town for a meeting with Capelle, Seagrue inquired his way to the prison.

The jailer had brought Spike his noonday meal—a dish of stew, a loaf of soggy bread and a tin of coffee—and Spike was settling himself on his iron cot when Seagrue, with the jailer, entered his cell.

Greetings passed between Seagrue and Spike as they met and the two exchanged a few blurring remarks, calculated to mislead the listening official. But Spike's roving eyes riveted themselves gradually on the bunch of jangling keys carried by the jailer in his hand. When the jailer looked his way, the bullet head of Spike was down and his eyes were fixed on the loaf of heavy bread from which he was tearing great chunks to eat. A thought had come into his head and if it could be successfully acted on, it offered a faint hope of escape. Watching his opportunity, he managed after some effort to make Seagrue understand what he wanted, i. e., that he should occupy for a while the jailer's attention.

In the meantime, while Spike's iron jaw was grinding at a chunk of the crust, he was tearing out the center of the loaf of bread with his hand and kneading the dough thus fished within his palm. Seagrue made a good confederate, and without much trouble engaged the jailer's interest. It was then that Spike, leaning back, managed, undetected, to pass the dough around the key that opened the lock of his own cell; in an instant he had the coveted impression.

A bell warned the jailer that the visitor's time was up. In parting, the confederates shook hands. As they did so, Spike slipped the dough, unserved, into Seagrue's palm and succeeded in conveying to him by signs an intimation of what he had given him.

Capelle, who had arrived on Seagrue's prearranged summons, at the appointed place, some distance from the jail, awaited Seagrue there with a grin: "Some expedition you've embarked on!"

POOR MAPLE SUGAR CROP IS REPORTED IN VERMONT

Chicago, Feb. 8.—Vermont apparently has exhausted its maple sugar crop, and the nation's sweet tooth will lack this saccharine confection this year, dealers here said today. The crop was less than half normal last year, and this spring, unless the weather improves, the maple sugar crop will be even smaller. Real maple sugar is sold for as much as 25 cents a pound and sirup for as much as 55 cents a quart.

AT MYERS THEATRE.

"Frederik the Great." "Frederik the Great" comes to the Myers theatre for three days' engagement, starting Thursday, Feb. 10, and local theatregoers are promised one of the most novel and interesting entertainments ever offered in this city. Frederik is assisted by a company of ten people and carries a carload of special properties and scenic and electrical effects for his unique performance. Not since the days of the renowned Hermann has there been a real magician with a big show in Jamesville and the prices for this engagement are within the reach of all. The show is a full two hours and in all there are over twenty-five numbers on the program.

AT MYERS THEATRE.

The magnitude of David W. Griffith's feat in staging "The Birth of a Nation," is most appalling at least to the devotees of the older forms of theatrical entertainment. Where now are the little groups of actors, the pinchbeck scenery and the petty properties of the old-fashioned drama? By comparison with the art, the "legitimate" measures to the mountain like a molehill. Instead of scenery for his background Griffith has used Nature. For subject he has chosen the history of America and history. Eighteen thousand people have done his bidding and in the hair-raising rides of the Ku Klux Klan three thousand riders and horses sweep over the dusty stage.

No wonder that this magnificent historical spectacle is the talk of the country. It has established an entirely new art in the realm of the theatre—the art of pantomime and spectacles with an orchestral score perfectly synchronized to the action. It has also created a tremendous sensation because of its vaster and more forcible treatment of the theme of Reconstruction. The theme of the great deeds of the Civil War and the horrors of Reconstruction are made to live again and the nation reborn is apotheosized. Mr. Griffith, pioneer among directors, managed this stupendous achievement without the aid of dialogue or speech, for motion pictures with music and effects tell vividly this thrilling tale of fifty years ago.

"The Birth of a Nation" will be shown at Myers Theatre 5 days starting Sunday matinee February 13.

depicting the same role on the screen as he originated on the stage. This subject has aroused unusual interest and laudable comment because of the able way the producers handled it for the screen and its appeal to American patriotism.

It is most interesting, indeed, that this play which makes the United States a haven for the foreign oppressed, was written by an Englishman and appeared in theatres in continental Europe before the war. It is distinctly an American drama and contrasts vividly the freedom enjoyed by American citizens against the oppression suffered by foreigners, especially in Russia.

The United States is pictured as the crucible of the universe to which the downtrodden from other nations come to be molded in the great melting pot of the truth type of the American. The American flag which closes the play never has been used more appropriately to wind up an American play than in this patriotic picture.

"The Melting Pot" revolves around the death of a young Russian, the lost his parents in a pogrom in his native country and migrated to America. Here he becomes a successful musician and is inspired to compose a symphony, its theme being of the United States. Here, also, he meets and falls in love with the daughter of the man who was at the head of the massacre in which his musician lost his life. A powerful dramatic situation develops from this circumstance and enables the star and his leading woman, Valentine Grant, to demonstrate their emotional ability.

AT THE PRINCESS.

"OLD HEIDELBERG." An hour of unalloyed enjoyment is promised to the patrons of the Princess on Wednesday and Thursday in the Triangle Fine Arts five part play, "Old Heidelberg," with pretty pictures, with the story of the Wallace Reid in the leading roles of Prince Karl and the innkeeper's daughter. The story is as follows:

Karl Heinrich, the hereditary prince of Rutania, according to the strict military rules of court, which even as a small child he rebelled against. When he is twenty years old he is sent to the University of Heidelberg, where he meets Kathie, the niece of the innkeeper whose father he has just killed. A romance springs up, which is short lived, however, as before his first year is finished his uncle, the reigning prince, determines to enter a great war and sends Karl to come and take command of his troops. Karl at first refuses to do this, but Dr. Jutner, his old tutor, persuades him to go, thinking that perhaps his presence will prevent the war. The uncle is obstinate, and Karl is unable to dissuade him from entering the war, although the people are dying of heart failure. Karl quietens the people by telling them that there will be no war and his marriage of state.

For reasons of state Karl's uncle has betrothed him to a princess of a neighboring principality, and Karl is in honor bound to carry out the agreement. Though his heart is breaking for Kathie, he determines to return to Heidelberg and bid the students and Kathie goodbye, but finds that in becoming the reigning prince he is separated from his old friend, even Kathie is somewhat in awe of him. With breaking hearts they say goodbye, and Karl returns to take up his duties and his marriage of state.

AT THE MAJESTIC.

"The Beloved Vagabond," a Splendid Six-Part, Hand-Colored Visualization of William Locke's Book, With Edwin Arden in the Title Role.

So marvelous an interpretation has Edwin Arden given us of the character of the "loved vagabond," and with such artistic skill that Director Edward Jose outlined the significance of Locke's theme that there seems little left to be desired to make the production a singularly perfect one.

Months previous to its actual date of release "The Beloved Vagabond" has been heralded. Many and varied have been the comments on the advisability of filming this particular story of William J. Locke's, and again it is proven that the treatment the story gets at the hands of first the adapter, and then the director, is the final word as to the film possibilities of any literary work.

The film, made here in America, was sent to Paris to be hand colored, the result being a delightful enhancement of an already beautiful production.

"The Beloved Vagabond" will be seen for the last showings tonight at the Majestic.

"MOVIES" OF BEES WORKING ON ORCHID

Photographic Demonstration Was Made by Park Commissioner on Fertilization of Rare Plants.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] St. Louis, Feb. 8.—Photographic demonstration of the theory advanced by certain scientists that the bucket orchid—an extremely rare plant—is fertilized by the battle of bumblebees which seek food from the flower, has been made by Dwight Davis, former park commissioner of St. Louis.

Mr. Davis had moving pictures of bumble bees at work on the bucket orchid taken at the Missouri Botanical Garden (Shaw's garden) here.

This is what the moving pictures show: Large bumblebees gather on the edge of the cup of the orchid and struggle with one another for a foothold. Some of the bumblebees tumble into the cup, which is half filled with nectar. This nectar sticks to the wings of the bees and prevents them from flying out.

There is only one way for the bumblebee to get out of the nectar and that is to crawl through a tube-like passage leading to the lower end of the flower. The walls of this passage are covered with pollen and some of it clings to the sticky wings and backs of the bees. As they force their way out of the opening, some of the pollen which has attached to them is inserted into the stigma of the plant, and thus the flower is fertilized.

When the bees finally get out of the flower, they fly back to the edge or the edge of the cup of the orchid and again battle for a foothold from which they can eat the lining of the nectar. The moving pictures that illustrate this method of plant reproduction will be shown at society parties and at the public school children.

Mr. Davis recently has developed a keen interest in the scientific side of moving pictures, and he has suggested that some of the money which cities spend on zoological gardens could be more profitably and entertainingly spent in sending camera expeditions to jungles and taking moving pictures of the habits of wild animals.

TRIANGLE STAGES CIVIL WAR DRAMA

"The Coward" With Frank Keenan and Eddie Foy in a "Favorite Fool" Featured at Princess Theatre.

In "The Coward" Frank Keenan was seen last night at the Princess in a marvelous impersonation of an old confederate colonel, who finds much to his disappointment that his son is a coward and does not desire the proud name of his ancestors. Charles Ray aids Mr. Keenan in taking the part of the boy in a sincere and forceful way. The scenes in the latter parts of the picture showing the invasion of the "Yanks" and the spirited charge of the confederate troops on the weak Union center demanded much efficient directing and showed up in true realistic manner—the horrors of war.

Eddie Foy, coming afterward in the Keystone farce "A Favorite Fool," showed himself and his seven little boys in a laughable circus tragedy of two delightful reels. As a clown he is always at home and the only regret last night that we could only have seen more of him.

Both features will be shown again this evening.

LAKOTA MINSTRELS FOLLOWING EASTER

Club at Meeting Last Evening Decided to Give Annual Show This Year.

Members of the Lakota club at their regular meeting last evening decided definitely to put on a minstrel show at an early date following the Lenten season and Easter. The matter had been considered for some time but nothing really definite was done until last evening.

J. Peter Hammarlund was named by President Ralph Souleman as general director of the affair. J. Francis Connors will supervise the production and direct the musical end. William McDonald and Howard Clotter will have charge of the sketches. Owen Shavlen, William Eickman and Carson Bumgarner the properties and Roy and Earl Merrick the advertising.

With the club being able to present a cast of sixty this year and with the high enthusiasm which has predominated among the members after a period of the past eight or more months, it is felt that the show this season can eclipse any former venture of similar type attempted by the club.

Following the meeting last evening the house committee served a roast pig dinner, a la carte style. Members of the newly organized club orchestra composed of Walter Abris, piano, C. Bumgarner and Howard Clotter, violins, Tracey Allen and Oscar Hammarlund, mandolins, and Carl Keller, drums, and Howard Clotter, who will have charge of the sketches, will have an impromptu program of popular musical numbers.

The club's annual Ladies' night will be held on Thursday evening. At least fifty members and their lady friends will dine at the Myers hotel at 7:30 o'clock, the dinner to be followed by a short program. After the repeat the gathering will adjourn to the club quarters where the open house for the ladies will be held. There is also to be a dancing party in the Terpsichorean hall.

MARGUERITE CLARK CHARMS IN DUAL ROLE

Mark Twain's Romance is Pleasingly Picturized into Photoplay.

The quiet little romance of Mark Twain's "The Prince and the Pauper" is one of the most delightful pictures that Marguerite Clark has played in. The Apollo couldn't hold it last night. Miss Clark makes out charmingly in her dual role of pauper and prince. She accomplishes distinct characterizations so that the audience despite the change of costume, knows which is prince and which is beggar, though king and mother is mistaken.

Set with consistent surroundings and characterful players this picture is full of real atmosphere, wherein lies the Famous Players success.

CHAPTER XXIX.

A Strange Interview.

Releasing the girl instantly, before the crash had ceased to reverberate within those walls, Lanyard slipped to one side of the doorway, whence he could command the perspective of salons together with a partial view of the front doors.

He was no more than established there, in the shadow and shelter of the portieres, when light from an electric floodlight flooded the reception hall.

It showed him first a single figure, that of a handsome woman well beyond middle age, but still well poised and vigorous of mien, a lady of commanding presence. She was in full evening dress of such magnificence as to suggest attendance at some function of state. Even had he not known well the features of Mme. Omber, he would have guessed her to be the mistress of the establishment.

Standing beneath the chandelier, she was restoring a key to a brocade handbag. This done, she turned her head and spoke over her shoulder. Promptly there came into view a second woman of much the same age, but even more strong and able of appearance—a woman in plain, dark garments, undoubtedly madame's maid.

Handing over her handbag, Mme. Omber unlatched the throat of her ermine cloak and surrendered it to the servant's hands.

Her next words were audible to the eavesdropper, and reassuring in so far as they indicated ignorance of anything amiss:

"Thank you, Sidonie. You may go to bed now."

"Madame will not require me to undress her?"

"I'm not ready yet. When I am, I can take care of myself. It's late—much later than I usually keep you up, Sidonie, and I prefer you to go to bed. It doesn't improve your temper to lose your head."

"Many thanks, madame. Good-night, madame."

"Good-night."

The maid moved off toward the main staircase, while the mistress of the house turned deliberately through the salon toward the library.

At this, swinging back to the girl in a stride, and impulsively grasping her wrist to compel attention, Lanyard spoke in a rapid whisper, mouth close beside her cheek.

"This way," he said, imperatively drawing her toward the window by which he had entered. "There's a balcony outside—a short drop to the ground." And unlatching the window, he urged her through it. "Try to leave by the back gateway—the one I showed you—avoiding Ekstrom."

"But you are coming!" she insisted, hanging back.

"Impossible. There isn't time for us both to escape undetected. I shall keep her interested only long enough to give her plenty of time to get away. But take this—and he pressed his automatic into her hand. "No—take it, I've another," he lied, "and you may need it. Don't fear for me, but go—oh, my heart—go!"

The footfalls of Mme. Omber were sounding ominously near by this time, and without giving the girl more time to protest, Lanyard thrust her forcibly through the windows, closed them, shot the latch and stole like a ghost round the farther side of the desk, pausing within a few feet of the screen and safe.

The footsteps were muffled by a rug in the drawing room—the woman was walking slowly, heavily, like one weary and thoughtful.

Where the girl had placed it, behind the cinnabar screen, the desk-lamp was still alight, and Lanyard knew that the diffusion of its reflected rays was enough to project his figure in silhouette against the glow distinctly visible to one on the threshold.

Now everything hung upon the temperament of the householder, how she would take that apparition—whether quietly, deceived by Lanyard's manner, into believing she had only a poor thiefish foot to deal with, or with bourgeois hysteria.

In the latter event, Lanyard's hand was ready planted, palm down, on the top of the desk; should the other attempt to raise an alarm, a single bound would carry the adventurer across it in full flight for the front doors.

In the doorway the mistress of the house appeared and halted, quick, glinting eyes shifting from the glow on the floor to the dark figure of the thief. Then, with a quick gesture, putting forth a hand, she found the chandelier switch and turned on a blaze of light.

As this happened Lanyard cowered, lifting an elbow as if to guard his face—as if expecting to find himself under the muzzle of a revolver.

The gesture had the calculated effect of focusing the attention of the woman directly to him, after one swift glance round had taken in the curtains that were still swaying at the window, and shown her a room tenanted only by herself and a cowering thief. And immediately it was made manifest that, whether or not deceived, she meant to take the situation quietly, with a strong hand.

Her eyes narrowed and the muscles of her square and almost masculine jaw stood out prominently as she looked the intruder up and down in silence. Eventually a flicker of contempt moderated the grimness of her dark countenance. She took three steps forward, stopping on the other side of the desk, her back to the doorway.

Lanyard trembled visibly. "Well!"—the word boomed like the opening gun of an engagement. "Well, my man!"—the shrill eyes swerved to the closed door of the safe and quickly back—again—"you don't seem to have accomplished a great deal!"

Lanyard gripped the edge of the desk, quivering. "For God's sake, madame," he blurted in a husky, shaken voice, not unlike his own—"don't have me arrested! Give me a chance! I haven't taken anything. Don't call the flics!"

He paused, lifting an uncertain hand toward his throat, as if his tongue had gone dry.

"Come, come!" the woman answered, with a look almost of pity. "I haven't called anyone—as yet."

The fingers of one strong white hand were drumming gently on the top of the desk; then, with a movement so quick and sure that Lanyard himself could hardly have bettered it, they slipped to a handle of a drawer, jerked it open, closed round the butt of a revolver and presented it at Lanyard's head.

"Automatically he lifted his hands. "Don't shoot!" he cried. "I'm not armed."

"Is that the truth?"

"You've only to search me, madame!"

"Thanks!" Madame's accents now discovered a trace of somewhat dry humor. "I'll leave that to you. Turn out your pockets on the desk there—and remember, I'll stand no nonsense!"

The weapon covered Lanyard steadily, leaving him no alternative but to obey. As for that, he was glad of the excuse to listen for any sound to indicate how the girl was faring in her fight. And he made a pretense of trembling fingers to cover the slowness with which he complied.

But he heard nothing.

When at length he had visibly turned every pocket inside out, and their contents lay upon the desk, the woman looked them over incuriously.

"Put them back," she said curtly. "And then fetch that chair over there—the one in the corner. I've a notion I'd like to talk to you. That's the usual thing, isn't it?"

"How?" Lanyard demanded with a vacant stare.

"In all the criminal novels I've ever read, the law-abiding householder always sits down and has a sociable chat with the housebreaker—before calling in the police. I'm afraid that's part of the price you've to pay for my hospitality."

She paused, eyeing Lanyard inquisitively while he replaced his belongings in his pockets. "Now get that chair," she ordered, and waited, standing until she had been obeyed. "That's it—there! Sit down."

Resting herself against the side of the desk, the revolver held negligently, the speaker favored Lanyard with a second inspection, at her leisure, the hardness of her eyes modified, and that anger which primarily had marked her countenance gone by the time she chose to pursue her catechism.

"What's your name? No—don't answer! I saw your eyes waver, and I'm not interested in a makeshift alias. But it's a stock question, you know. Do you care for a cigar?"

She opened a mahogany humidor on the desk and extracted a box.

"No, thanks."

"Right—according to Hoyle—the criminal always refuses to smoke in these scenes. But let's forget the book

"Don't shoot!" he cried. "I'm not armed."

and write our own lines. I'll ask you an original question: Why were you acting just now?"

"Acting?" Lanyard repeated, intrigued by the acuteness of this masterful woman's mentality.

"Precisely—pretending you're an ordinary criminal. For a moment I actually believed you afraid of me. But you're neither that nor a common crook. How do I know? Because you're unarmed; your voice has changed in the last two minutes to that of a cultivated man; you've stopped cringing and started thinking; and the way you walked across the floor just now and handled that chair showed me how powerfully you're made. If I hadn't found this revolver you could overpower me in an instant—and I'm no weakling, as women go. Then why the acting?"

Studying his captor with narrow interest, Lanyard smiled faintly and shrugged, but made no response. He could do no more than this—no more than spar for time. The longer he indulged this woman in her whim for the bizarre, the more assured were Lucy's chances of escape. By this time, he reckoned, she must have found her way through the service gate to the street. But he was on edge with apprehension of mischief.

"Come, come!" Mme. Omber insisted. "You're hardly civil, my good man. Answer my question."

"You don't expect me to—do you?"

"Why not? You owe me at least satisfaction of my curiosity in return for breaking into my house."

"But if, as you suggest, I am—or was—acting with a purpose, why do you expect me to give the show away?"

"That's logic. I knew you could think. More's the pity!"

"Pity I can think?"

"Pity you can get your own consent to waste yourself like this. I'm an old woman, and I know men better than most; I can see ability in you; so if it's a pity you won't employ it to better advantage. Don't misunderstand me; this isn't the conventional act. I don't hold with encouraging a fool in his folly. You're a fool, for all your intelligence, and the only cure I can see for you is drastic punishment."

"Meaning the Sante, madame?"

"Quite so. I tell you frankly, when I'm finished lecturing you, off you go to prison."

"If that's the case, I don't see I stand to gain much by retelling the history of my life. This seems to be your cue to ring for servants to call the police."

A glint of anger shone in the woman's eyes.

"You're right," she said shortly. "I dare say Sidonie isn't asleep yet. I'll get her to telephone while I stand guard over you."

Bending over the desk, without removing her gaze from the adventurer, his captor groped for, found and pressed a call-button.

From some remote quarter of the house sounded the grumble of an electric bell.

"Pity you're so brazen," she commented. "Just a little less said, and you'd be a rather engaging person!"

Lanyard made no reply. In fact, he wasn't attending.

In this suspense the iron control, which had always heretofore been his was breaking down—since now it was for another that he was concerned. And he wasted no strength trying to enforce it. The stress of his anxiety was, both undisguised and indistinguishable. Nor did Mme. Omber overlook it.

"What's the trouble, eh? Is it that already the cell door clangs loudly in your ears?"

As the woman spoke Lanyard left his chair with a spring as lithe and sure and swift as an animal's, that carried him like a shot across the two yards or so that separated them.

A hair's breadth of error in his reckoning would have finished him, for the other had been alert for just such a move, and the revolver was nearly level with Lanyard's head when he seized it by the barrel, imprisoned the woman's wrist with his other hand, and in two movements had possessed himself of the pistol without hurting his owner.

"Don't be alarmed," he said quietly. "I'm not going to do anything more violent than to put this out of commission."

Breaking it smartly, he shot a shower of cartridges to the floor. The empty weapon itself he tossed into a wastebasket beneath the desk.

"Hope I didn't hurt you," he added abstractedly—"but your pistol was in my way!"

He took a stride toward the door, then hung there in hesitation, frowning absently at the woman, who, without moving, laughed quietly and eyed Lanyard with a twinkle of malicious diversion.

The adventurer returned her stare with one of thoughtful appraisal; from the first he had recognized in her a character of uncommon tolerance and amiability.

"Pardon, madame, but—" he began abruptly, then checked himself in constrained appreciation of his impudence.

"If that's permission to interrupt your reverie," Mme. Omber remarked, "I don't mind telling you you're the strangest burglar I ever heard of!"

Footfalls became audible on the stairway—the hasty, scuffling sounds of slipped feet.

"Is that you, Sidonie?" madame called.

"The voice of the maid replied: "Yes, madame—coming!"

"Well—don't, just yet. Wait there till I call you."

"Very good, madame."

The woman returned complete attention to Lanyard.

"Now, monsieur of two minds, what is it you wish?"

"Why did you do that?" the adventurer asked, nodding toward the reception hall.

"Tell Sidonie to wait instead of calling for help? Because—well, because you interest me strangely. I've a curious notion you're in desperate quandary and about to throw yourself on my mercy."

"I am," Lanyard admitted tersely.

"Ah! Now this does begin to grow interesting! Would you mind telling me why?"

"Because, madame, I have done you a great service, and feel I can count upon your gratitude."

The Frenchwoman's eyebrows lifted at this. "Doubtless monsieur knows what he's talking about—"

A Sure Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arsen from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

How to Make Want Ads Pay

Example No. 13

How to Sell Your Business

The first question that occurs to a person who reads a Want Ad that offers an established business for sale is this: "What is wrong? Why does he want to sell?"

You should answer this question in your Want Ad. That wipes out the doubt that is sure to arise if you do not explain.

Here are some illustrations of right and wrong ways of advertising a business for sale:

THE WRONG WAY

FOR SALE—BY MOTION PICTURE THEATRE; capacity 250; seat 1200; year to run; plays to capacity. Big meal! Call up phone.

Why does the owner wish to sell? The other ad tells why!

THE REASON FOR SELLING MUST BE SATISFACTORY

You must give a reason! Give a reasonable reason. Do not offer as your reason that you and your partner have quarrelled. Poor business may have made your quarrel!

Here are some perfectly acceptable reasons for selling your business:

Death of partner, ill health of partner or yourself, interests in other lines demand your time, moving out of town, retiring, getting too old, going on long journey, or anything else that is believable.

When you give a good reason,
